The multi-disciplinary college (estd 1983), affiliated to the University of Mumbai, offers 9 UG, 4 PG, 39 Short Term Courses, 44 Online Courses and 3 Ph.D. domains to over 4000 students. Nagindas Khandwala College has the distinction of being awarded an 'A' Grade by NAAC in three consecutive cycles, along with an ISO 9001:2008 certification by TUV Nord. In 2012, it was awarded the title of 'Best College' by the University of Mumbai. The College was also been awarded the Educational Excellence Award by Indus Foundation USA, and the title of 'Best Ensemble Faculty' of the Academic Brilliance Awards organised by Education Expo TV's Research Wing for Excellence in Professional Education and Industry in 2013. This was followed by the Ramkrishna Bajaj Quality Commendation Certificate. In 2016, Nagindas Khandwala became one of the few colleges in the city to be granted autonomy.

ABOUT THE SEMINAR

Technology has been seen as a cause of many beginnings and endings, even in education. While some have seen it as a harbinger of doom and destruction of the teaching profession, others have hailed it as a great leveller, making educational content (and by extension, education) accessible to anyone who can lay their hands on gadgets or use the internet. This is especially true in the realm of Language Learning and Teaching. While those interested in learning languages seem to have a plethora of choices, along with an apparently decreasing need to rely on conventional classrooms, there is a vocal minority predicting that with the imminent perfection of translation software, it is a matter of time when the need to learn more than one language will be obsolete. However, with the ever increasing development of educational software, apps, blogs, podcasts, Youtube channels, etc. coupled with the increasing affordability of internet and internet enabled gadgets, perhaps all stakeholders need to take stock. How has the ubiquitous nature of technology, affected Language Learning and Teaching so far? Also, perhaps more importantly, how is technology going to shape Language Learning and Teaching?

This seminar, which is being conducted by the Dept. of English, will try to answer these questions. The day-long (interdisciplinary) seminar is open to allied language departments like French, German, Hindi, Marathi, Gujarati, Sanskrit, Telugu, Urdu, Kannada, Tamil, etc. (or any other foreign or Indian language)

CALL FOR PAPERS

Original, unpublished contributions pertaining to Use of Technology in Language Learning and Teaching are invited. The paper could be related to any language but should be written in English. Following are the possible (but not exclusive) avenues for exploration:

- Efficacy/practicality of self learning modules and apps.
- Effect of technology on the interest of prospective/current students.
- Technology and teachers.
- Technology and crowded classrooms: Language learning and teaching in colleges.
- Quality control: Is there a need to monitor the content of independent learning apps?

Papers received will be reviewed. They will also be scrutinised using the Plagiarism Detection Software. Selected papers will be published in a UGC listed journal with ISSN on a subsequent date. Contributors will be intimated. ONLY AFTER THAT should they pay the Fees.

GUIDELINES FOR AUTHORS

- Papers must be in English, submitted in Word Document Format.
- The Abstract should not exceed 250 words.
- The main paper, along with the tables (if applicable) and reference should not exceed 2000 words.
- The font should be Times New Roman, size 12.
- The page size should be A4 with a 1.5 cm. margin on all sides and single spaced.
- Abstract and paper should be sent to LT@nkc.ac.in.
